Our Story

The Edmonton Short Film Festival

We began as a grassroots festival in 2012, with the goal of promoting our local film community and since then we've tremendously expanded to an international and virtual reach.

ESFF seeks to encourage and elevate independent film, with a special emphasis on showcasing Alberta filmmakers. Our Long Shorts program extended this opportunity to international artists.

When you attend the Edmonton Short Film Festival, expect to see almost anything—trailers, music videos, web series, drama, horror, comedy, documentaries, commercials and more. We accept exceptional short film projects from any creation date, even (or perhaps especially) those that are on the fringe of the “normal” festival market.

Our galas and workshops have emphasized hands-on, interactive entertainment. Our virtual events have increased accessibility, and further developing our online impact is a big part of the ESFF's future.

We recognize the power of film to bring people together and to foster an inclusive sense of community. We intentionally organize and participate in events that acknowledge and uplift diverse stories and voices.

Our Community

Today, we offer year-round workshops, events, and screenings that reach filmmakers, and an audience from Edmonton and beyond.

As active members of the Edmonton arts community, our network includes other arts organizations, filmmaking professionals, and professionals in related fields. We've prioritized collaborating with other local organizations and events for events and opportunities because we are passionate about mutual support in our community.

When ESFF grew to include the Long Shorts Program (showcasing films up to sixty minutes in length and open to submissions from filmmakers from all over the world), our audience grew as well. When the opportunity arose to provide virtual access to the films selected for ESFF, we took it! This has made ESFF accessible to supporters of our international filmmakers, worldwide communities, and those who can't attend in-person.

Our online audience is highly engaged, with over 7,200 followers for our social media posts and over 3,000 on our mailing lists. Our events, news, and educational opportunities have been boosted by platforms like Global News, CBC Edmonton, the Edmonton Journal, Edify Magazine and more.

We are continually looking for new ways to expand and reach broader audiences, while prioritizing the promotion of local creatives and sponsors.

Our Initiatives

Audiences can choose to attend the Edmonton Short Film Festival in-theatre or virtually from home. This blended model proved very successful since 2020 providing more opportunities to connect with broader online audiences.

Throughout COVID, we offered limited community events and starting in 2021 we have hosted screenings in partnership with other organizations to recognize important events throughout the year. These included partnering with Arts on the Ave to screen at Deep Freeze Festival; International Festival of Winter Cinema at Silver Skate Festival; Edmonton Public Library and Stony Plain Multicultural Centre for Black History Month; with Dreamspeakers Festival Society in recognition of National Indigenous History Month in June; and holding multiple screenings as part of Kaleido Family Arts Festival, Alberta Culture Days; Root 107 in downtown Edmonton, Downtown Business Association for the Holiday Light Up in Churchill Square and Audreys Books for a Truth & Reconciliation Film Screening & author event.

In 2023, we officially launched the Local Heroes Film Festival. The LHFF is a unique year-round festival that features community screenings for a variety of different community groups. This festival provides a platform for underrepresented communities to make, share, and gather around works that celebrate their history and experiences.

The Edmonton Short Film Festival is always seeking new opportunities to support our local filmmakers and to offer the public the chance to view entertaining, educational, original, and often deeply moving films.

Whether motivated by injustice, community activism, personal experiences, artistic expression, or comedic relief, the short films submitted to ESFF over the years have told stories that need to be shared and have shown us and our audiences the undeniable talent brewing right in our community.

In 2022 we marked our 10th anniversary by giving back to the community and launched the Alberta Screenwriter Accelerator Program (ASAP), designed to amplify more voices and help more Albertans branch into the film industry. We asked screenwriters to submit a short script about anything they wanted, with the winning submission to be produced into a short film which premiered at our 10th anniversary ESFF Red Carpet Gala on October 15, 2022.

In 2024 we offered a Film Career Development Program where we took a group of Mentees paired with Mentors through the full production of a film – from the script to post including sound composition. The Mentees were from under represented communities in the film sector.

These amazing opportunities are only possible with the strong support of sponsors like you. We are grateful for all the individuals and organizations that have partnered with us as we develop programming and opportunities for filmmakers and the public.
